Blyth Banks, who worked for a considerable time for Messrs. Stooks and Amery, has joined the A.M.C., and spent last week end visiting his friends in this locality prior to proceeding overseas.

The Village Council have put a new sidewalk at the north end of town adjoining that running east and west. We hear that it is the intention to put in a number of new crossings, also to do a lot of sidewalk repairs as soon as the lumber is available.

Boy Scouts.—The Boy Scouts, under the direction of Scout Master J. L. McRory, will be on parade Sunday evening May 6th, and march in procession to the Union Church. Everyone should attend the boys' service.

The Annual Meeting of the W.A. of the Church of the Ascension for the election of officers and business will be held at our home of Mrs. Bray, on Saturday afternoon, May the 12th, at 3 o'clock sharp.

All members and church ladies please attend.

The bank robbers didn't get very far after breaking into the bank at Edmonton on Saturday night last, being caught a few miles out of the city. The provincial police made a clean capture, the culprits being caught with their weapons and tools on them.

We are glad to see that a Special Appeal is being made on behalf of the Belgian Relief Fund, to take the form of a Whist Party, refreshments will be served, and a good time is anticipated. It is to be hoped that this effort will be the financial success it deserves, to help to relieve the destitute Belgians.

We have from time to time made appeals for this purpose, and while they have not brought the results which we expected, yet we have been enabled to assist in the good cause. If the committee appointed to carry present project out could see their way to become organized for the purpose of continuing, for a time, the relief work, it would be a most Christian labor.

Say boys, pretty close to Fair time, just the time to take your friends for a whirl round the circle.

CUSTOMS OF BURMA

Burmese Idea of the Soul After Death is Strange

Burma is the one place on earth where the death of a man owing large sums of money is no cause for worry to his creditors. In fact, the Burmese think that a creditor has a better chance of recovering a debt from the dead than from the living, provided the deceased has relations who are at all concerned for his welfare in the life beyond the grave. If the debt is not paid they believe that the dead man will come into the creditor's power as his servant, ox or dog.

The Burmese appear to have no ideas regarding the extinction of the land of the dead, or of the country from which the race came. The curious custom prevails of holding a complete funeral and burial ceremony in the hope of deceiving the Destroyer, and inducing him to leave a sick person alone.

The Burman regards it as a matter of course that the soul should continue to exist after death, and he believes that it remains in the house, and is content of all that goes on there, for seven days. The bed of the deceased person is laid, and a fresh supply of food and water is placed by it every morning and evening. During the same period hospitality is offered to all who come, and monks are invited to preach as well as to eat.

At the end of the seven days, the spirit departs. According to the Burmese, he is ejected by the house-god, Min Magayi, the mighty blacksmith who was burned alive by a king of Tagaung, and whose spirit watches over every Burman household. During the seven days he is not absolutely confined to the house. He may wander about visiting the places he was wont to visit in life.

BABOONS ARE HARMLESS

But One in Africa Fought Two Dogs "Manfully"

A letter from Capetown, South Africa, says: Two dogs and a baboon had a frightful battle at the Rietkuil farm in the Vitenhage district, and the "old man" would undoubtedly have finished off both his antagonists had not humans interfered. Natives seeing a troop of baboons walking up a small hill set out after them with the two dogs, which intercepted and drove one of the baboons towards a farm house. The baboon made for a tank at the corner of the house. The dogs vainly tried to get at it from one side, and the baboon jumped down the other side and made for a small wood, where he hid himself behind a bush. He calmly awaited the oncoming enemy.

The foremost dog had no sooner reached the bush than the baboon made a grab for it and with one bite bit its head off. The second dog pounced on the baboon, but before long its side was ripped open. The dog and was near when a shot from a native's gun killed the baboon. A curious part of the affair is the way the local newspapers treat it. Apparently no sympathy is conceived for the baboon, although these animals are inoffensive harmless animals unless attacked. They go about in troops, the old valiantly defending the young. When in trouble they moan and cry like children and their conduct is often remarkably human.

BOY'S HEART MASSAGED

Action Restored After Thirteen Minutes' Suspension

The story of how Albert Davies, aged 4, had his heart's action restored by massage after thirteen minutes' cessation is related in the privately circulated "Gazette" issued to the staff of Guy's Hospital, London, Eng. After the boy's tonsils had been removed he stopped breathing. Other means failing to restore respiration, which had ceased for twelve minutes, an incision was made to enable the surgeon to massage the heart. After about twenty squeezes the heart was suddenly felt to be beating and respiration was re-established, though at first the pulse was not perceptible, and the boy's condition remained extremely feeble. He was unconscious for two days. Only by unremitting care was he brought round gradually to perfect health.

The medical statement on the case concludes: "There have been several successful cases recorded of heart massage, but this case is perhaps unique, in that recovery took place after so long a time of cessation of the circulation. It can be imagined that it is extremely difficult to estimate time in emergencies, but it is certain that the heart had stopped at least thirteen minutes, and the impression of those present was that this figure should be between fifteen and twenty minutes."

COUGHING PLANT

Travellers tell us that in Eastern lands there is a peculiar plant called the coughing bean. The strange feature about this plant is that every once in a while it will make a sound that is just like the cough of a human being. When the plant is about to cough, it shakes all over, and then tightening up as a man does when he is about to sneeze, it gives a violent cough, which is followed by a little cloud of dust. Some of our readers are no doubt asking, "Why does the plant cough?" This seems to be the explanation: In the long dry heat which prevails in the desert, where the coughing plant grows, the pores of the plant become choked with dust, and it would die of suffocation, but for the fact that a powerful gas accumulates inside the plant, and when this gas has gained sufficient pressure, it explodes with a sound just like a human cough. This explosion shakes the pores of the plant free from dust, and thus once more the coughing bean is in good health again.

SOME QUANT SIGN

Don't Believe All You Read But Go In and See

A notice has been seen in a shop window in Norway which reads: "English spoken here. American understood." In foreign countries where English tourists foregather some very quaint notices have been seen at various times. On most of the large stations in Switzerland for instance one can see, "It is prohibited to traverse the rails unless one is invited to do so by the chief of the station." In Milan Cathedral there used to be a notice—it may be there now—which read: "Appeal to charitable The Brothers, so-called, of Mercy ask slender arms for the hospital. They harbor all kinds of diseases, and have no respect to religion." Japan has the most numerous notices displayed. Nearly all the Japanese exhibits a placard, printed in English, advertising goods, some of which are very comical. "Horse-shoe maker instructed by French horse-leech," you read; or, "If you want sell watch, I will buy; if you want buy watch, I will sell. Yes sir, we will, all will. Come at my shop. Watchmaker."

A Japanese laundry company announced: "We most carefully and cleanly wash our customers' with cheaper prices. Gentlemen, $1.75 a hundred, ladies $2.50 a hundred," while a certain dry cleaner announced that they sold "Extracts of fowls."

The Downfall Of Germany

Thousands of Women and Children
Sent to Board With Neutrals to Escape Starvation at Home

P. M. Van Der Klei, a native of Holland, a printer, who has returned to New York after a sojourn of fourteen months in Germany, continues his series of articles in the New York Evening sun, he writes: "The German resistance movement is a product of the German people's resistance to the stubborn German spirit of perseverance. Among the Germans, the sense of themselves this is attributed to their sense of patriotism. Beyond doubt or question they are patriotic. They are putting up with adversities that would not be tolerated. As a Hollander I can say that my people could not have stood the privations that the German people are standing. While in Berlin I had many conversations with other neutral nationals, and in every case heard the same testimony that the German nation would not have held out so long.

This is the secret: From the very hour of the outbreak of the war the German people have been made to believe that this war was started by their enemies and that the Teutonic peoples are fighting a defensive war. Ask them about Belgium or Serbia and they will tell you that "the best way to conduct a defensive war is to take the offensive." This expression is not new in the military vocabulary of the average German. From his school days every child has been trained in this first principle of national policy. This is a German char-

Holland if a schoolboy was about to undertake a serious dispute with a German boy it was found to be the best policy to hit him first and then argue afterward; for if you neglected this "tactic" he would certainly be the first one to utilize it. So much for Belgium and Serbia.

Germany will hold out until she cracks and crumbles. She is cracking; watch for the crash. The German government will again ask for peace; she will attempt to secure peace even if she has to sacrifice every inch of her allies' territory. She has very little use for Austria; she has contempt for the Bulgars; I have not heard one good word for the Turks or their government; they are always bitterly complaining that Hungary is holding back foodstuffs from the rest of the allies. Germany is for Germany.

Germany is suffering from food shortage, but the shortage of fat will be the deciding factor in German defeat.

I have been repeatedly asked if I could positively state that Germany has not enough food to continue another six months or so. All I can say is that the German people are large are suffering terrible agonies because of the food shortage. If the German government has plenty of food and is holding it back from the people for future use, that I do not know. What I know is what I saw and myself personally suffered during my fourteen months of residence in Germany.

I am an able bodied man, of years. I reached Germany with nearly $150 in my pocket. During the entire fourteen months of residence in Germany I worked twelve months and two weeks. I received about 20 percent more wages than in the pre-war days. I had not one penny depending upon my weekly income. I spent it all on myself. I sometimes took a glass of beer and an apple. I had no money for anything else. The stuffs which are not food cards—Candy, high priced sweets, and poultry meats may be procured without cards if one has the price. The price was high. I had to pay 85 marks. I once more repeated that I do not know whether the German government can lay its hands on the "stored up" food reserves. I know that the food reserves are being sold during my whole residence in Germany. I lost twenty-two pounds; I lost it gradually. I left Germany because I was starving.

My wife and I were in Berlin for many, many applications for my good by middle class and well to do parents to procure board for their children in Holland with good families communicated with over fifty Holland families and secured board in Holland for nearly 120 German children and seventy-five women. Thousands of German women and children are being sent out to Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Switzerland on the authority of one of the well informed Vorwaerts editors during the last nine months.

Ger- than 100,000 German women were children have been thus sent o
Aus- the country in order to save t lings from sure starvation. Within the next three months this number want surely be doubled. The neutral c

He was glad that she had not found Cooper. The more he was interested in Dolly Egerton the more he disliked and resented Cooper. The man had saved her life. It was natural she should be grateful to him. But he hated any intimacy between them. He said to himself that if Cooper had saved her life many times he would have the power, would forbid any intercourse between them. He was beginning to hope that he should have the power.

"Trust me," he said, "I've nursed many dogs, till I had forbade me having any dogs but him." He turned about and went with her. She told him about Keeper. Of late the dog

I would certainly recommend these medicines to any one suffering as I did."—Mrs. Wm. Plummer, Beechmont, Ont.

An indication of nature's method of replacing waste of tissue, enriching impoverished blood and increasing nerve force when you take an alternative extract of herbs and roots made by pure glycerine, without the use of alcohol, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine coaxes the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Pure blood is essential to good health. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood, impurities but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood. had been restless, escaped from the house as often as he could, and wandered. He had grown very thin.

"I had to leave him so much alone," she said, "that I was very lonely and voice. 'Louise would not have him there. She dislikes dogs. She said she could not trust him with Susan. If she had only seen me and Susan together, Susan, little darling, loves him. My poor Keeper, he belongs to my good days. Lee, as I said, when Louise would not have him in the house. I can understand men. Louise thought a kennel with a run would be very nice for him. That was why I lived in the Old Cottage, at least partly. I love it! It is my place of refuge.' She had never spoken to him so freely before. She had not had many opportunities, although he had been much at the Egerton's, and they had lunched and dined and tea'd with him at Silverthorn Manor. On those occasions, Mrs. Egerton had claimed his attention with a manner of indolent acceptance of its being her right. Hilary had paired off with Dolly as long as he stayed, and Lionel Egerton, with little Susan on his shoulder or led by the hand, wandered in the gardens, or laid the grass, his hat pulled over his eyes, while the child sat contentedly playing with the daisies.

Not from Dolly herself, but from her brother's frank speech had he got at the heart of the girl's tragedy. Her devotion had been given to her brother till the other woman came and pushed her out. Somewhere else, sharpened the Squire's wits, for he, who was not quick about such things, had become aware that Mrs. Egerton deliberately excluded her sister-in-law, kept her away from both husband and child. Dolly's extravagant worship of the child had no counterpart in the mother's tolerance of the "brat," as she always called the charming little creature. And the child, loved Dolly, would always run to her, when she escaped from her mother. Of late he had observed an availing of maternal emotions in Mrs. Egerton when it was a question of Dolly and Susan.

Only yesterday Egerton had remarked unobtrusively, "Why, Gary, what has come to you? You used to be bored with the kid, and willing to let anybody take her off your hands. Why not let Dolly take her for a walk?"

"Because I prefer to take her myself," Mrs. Egerton had replied with what her husband called her "monna Lisa smile." "Perhaps I am beginning to take an interest in her after all, although she is such a naughty little thing."

"But Susan!" said the father, looking down humorously at the fairy-faced child. "You speak! Imagine your being naughty!"

But Susan certainly was naughty, for she cried steadily till she drove her father from his work, while her mother, still wearing the "monna Lisa smile," insisted that it was time Susan should learn to obey.

As they approached the New Cottage, they saw in the distance the figure of a man approaching them.

"Oh," said Dolly, "it is Mr. Cooper. They told me he was away last night when I called at the shop."

What shall I do?

The Squire spoke as though life and death, more than the dog's depended on her acceptance of what he said.

"Don't ask his advice. I am quite qualified to advise. If there is anything a vet. can do I will telegraph to Tattleham."

"Very well," said the girl under her breath. Did her sigh mean relief? "I need not tell him, then! I am glad I met you."

Cooper came along the road with the swaggering gait which was characteristic of him. As he came near enough to be aware of the girl his expression changed. A curious darkness overcast his face, deepening the color almost to purple. His eyes, with the yellow whites to them, scowled. The Squire thought he heard a little catch of the breath in his companion's. Was it possible she was afraid of the fellow?

"Good morning!" he said, chilly polite. Cooper made as though to stop; then seeing that they were going on, he passed them, lifting his hat with a sullen response.

"We ought to have spoken to him," said Dolly Egerton under her breath.

"He looked so angry. I never meant to have passed him by like that."

The Squire made a most ungracious speech.

"If it depended on me, you would always pass him by," he said. "I wish it depended on me."

"But why?" asked the girl, lifting her wet eyes to him.

"I don't know. I detest the fellow."

"You know what he did for me?" "I know. I wish someone else had done it."

"He is very brave," said Dolly, and a wave of color came over her face.

"I know he is not exactly a gentle man; but I can never forget the horrible thing he saved me from. That minute when I sat there helpless, seeing the head-lights of the train sweep round the curve. It seemed that nothing could have saved me. Really and truly he seemed like an angel to me when I saw him. I try to remember it now, when I am disposed to hate him. I suppose he cannot help his looks and his manners. You would try to forget all that, would you not, if he had saved your life?"

So she knew. The Squire felt an immense sense of relief. "I wish someone else had rendered you that service," he said. "I wish I had done it!"—then he added, "As with an effort," "I concede that he is brave—and efficient. I have seen his efficiency in action."

They turned in at the white gate of the New Cottage, crossed the lawn, and went in at the opening in the private hedge. Dolly unlocked the cottage door with a key taken from under a stone. She listened with a strained anxiety.

There was a sound—the thumping of a dog's tail upon the floor. Pushing open the door, she ran to the dog, who lay in a corner of the room up against the wall. She knelt down by him. The tail still beat the ground feebly; but the eyes had begun not to see.

"Oh," she cried, with piteous entreaty, "what is the matter with him? My darling old dog! Is he dying?" A great sigh shook the dog. There was a little struggle, which she did not see because the Squire had put an arm about her and hidden her face. Keeper was dead. He had just lived long enough to recognize his mistress on her return. It was the last sentient act.

At first she was inconsolable. She was possessed by some painful remorse for fancied unkindness to an old friend. There had been a day when she had been angry with Louise, and she had spoken harshly to her when he came thrashing his head into her hand. She had left him alone for hours in the cottage. She had kept him a tie, a hindrance, when she wanted to go up to London. The Squire consoled her patiently and tenderly.

"I wish you would go up to London now," he said, "and leave me to deal with this." He sighed because Lionel Egerton was away, though he would be back in a few days. Dolly sat and wept heart-broken tears, while the form of the dog settled into rigidity. She wept for her own over neglect, or fancied neglect, of him; and for minute acts of impatience which, if such a thing is possible, were excused the mistress he adored. She wept for the lost companionship, for the years the dog had taken with him.

Ships Biggest British Need

Call for Speeding up Mercantile Shipbuilding Becomes More Insistent

London press and public men are confident that the military situation is well in hand. The only element of uncertainty is the submarine warfare's effect on the food supply. The call for speeding up the mercantile shipbuilding is most insistent. It takes the place of the demands earlier in the war for men and munitions. The action of neutrals in building ships in port has been the subject of inquiries and discussion in the House of Commons, and there may be further developments in this direction, more important to Canada, if the Danes and Hollanders are unable to ship their dairy products in their own vessels or are unwilling to take any risk at all.

In carrying on in London the established business of provisioning Britain, there is a disposition here to turn more and more toward making the Empire self-contained in the matter of foodstuffs in peace or war. Canada profits at once by this, because she is the nearest of the overseas dominions, and must ship of sympathetic contact acts in every way to bring about a good understanding.—From the London Daily Chronicle.

The valor and candid simplicity of the Indian Babu is proverbial. A story goes of one among the German East campaign, who—in the words of a contemporary—was about the most laconic, competent, deadly earnest station-master and marksman combined that ever lived. A regiment of men like him would end the war; for this is the wire he sent: "One hundred Germans attacking station. Send immediately one rifle and one hundred rounds of ammunition."

"Say, Casey, did you ever make an idiot of yourself over women?" "An idiot, is it? Sure, I've made myself an infirmary asylum."

To Exempt Soldiers From Taxes

By an amendment which was agreed upon in the Saskatchewan legislature provision is made at once in the Rural Municipality Act whereby all Saskatchewan persons who have joined, as volunteers or reservists, the forces of His Majesty or any of the Allies of Great Britain, for overseas service in the present war, shall be exempt from all taxation of their land up to half a section.

Language and Alliances

A Tribute to the Binding Power of a Mutual Tongue

No two nations speaking the same language are fighting against each other in this war. It is also true that there can never be a perfect alliance between any two nations which do not speak the same tongue. There can be strong economic and military alliances between countries, these alliances being arranged by the respective governments, the benefits fully appreciated by the peoples, and a mutual understanding existing between these individuals who are able to communicate with each other. A perfect alliance between two nations, if such a thing is possible, means that the people of each nation are able to visualize the habit of thought of the other, this not applying to the few that are particularly well informed, but to all farmers, workmen and business men, as well as scholars, diplomats and social cosmopolites. Between America and England, therefore, exists a bond like that between no other two great countries in the world, with the exception of Germany and Austria, and the closeness of the alliance between these two nations is tribute to the binding power of a mutual tongue. This point of sympathetic contact acts in every way to bring about a good understanding.—From the London Daily Chronicle.

Care of Eggs for Hatching

Eggs for hatching purposes should not be held over ten days. The fresher they are when put in the incubator, the better. They need to be gathered often to prevent chilling in the nests. A mixture of various sizes and shapes is a sure guarantee of different results. Dirty eggs also are to be avoided, as the pores in the shell of such eggs are closed up, thus preventing proper entrance of fresh air or the escape of gases from the eggs. Washing and drying with a cloth destroys the cuticle of an egg, and permits too rapid evaporation of its moisture.

$75,000,000 More for West

The wheat crop of Western Canada, says the Winnipeg Telegram, has proven to be some thirty per cent larger than was originally estimated by the crop experts. The crop was placed at from 170,000,000 to 180,000,000 bushels, but it will run about 225,000,000 bushels. At $1.50 per bushel (which is less than the current market price) it means that the western wheat crop is worth some $75,000,000 more than was originally estimated.

CONSTIPATED CHILDREN

Constipation is one of the most common ailments of childhood. The child suffering from it cannot thrive. To keep the little one well the bowels must be kept regular at the stomach sweet. To do this the best and most natural way is to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Concerning them Mrs. Romain Poirer, Mizonette, N. B., says:—"My baby suffered from constipation. I thank to Baby's Own Tablets. The pills sell everywhere. Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockton, Mass."

The Farmers' Era Arrives

Governments Trying to Get on the Good Side of the Land Tiller

According to the evidences of the naked eye there is a wild scramble by all governments of Canada to get on the good side of the farmers. Which must cause chafers among our friends in the country who have vivid recollections of the days when the powers scorned their intelligence and the politicians of the time laid upon the leaders of Canada the blame for a country that is dependent for its greatest wealth production upon its agriculture. Hence those who protest at this game vying for the respect of the farmer are not to be expected. And further, legislation that will put the farming class on a par with the banking, manufacturing and transportation classes in the matter of rights and benefits is being enacted with more haste than decorum. Truly it is a great day for the farmer.

MRS. ROGER GIVES CREDIT TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

(Special)—Mrs. J. S. Roger, the popular teacher here, is fully recovered from a long stage of sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism and other ailments resulting from diseased kidneys and has made statements in which she gives credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills for her cure.

"I was troubled some from a strain on the back," Mrs. Roger states, "and suffered for thirteen months. Backache, head flutters, sciatica, neuralgia, dizziness, and rheumatism were some of my symptoms. When the doctor considered failed to do me any lasting benefit, I decided to try the root of my troubles and decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took them for a few days and was so much judge of the results when I tell you that I have not lost a day's work since I began to take them."

"I can say that Dodd's Kidney Pills have done all for me that was claimed for them."

Others of Mrs. Rogers' symptoms were nervousness, that tired feeling, aching of the joints, the face flushed and burned at night. They all came from diseased kidneys. They were cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Invents Apparatus To Destroy Subs.

Wonderful Claims Are Made for New Pittsburgh Man's Discovery

Theodore Eichholz, a young engineer and architect of Pittsburgh, has invented a wireless device that may be used to destroy submarines by causing an explosion of gases that are always present in submarines.

Several years ago the inventor was connected with the United States Corps of Engineers.

Mr. Eichholz stated that a few days ago a small experimental apparatus in his home on Neville Island sunk a model submarine in the Ohio River five miles away. The destroyed model was built of steel and was submerged to a depth of ten feet.

The man who had made a huge fortune was speaking a few words to a number of students at a business class. Of course, the main theme of his address was himself.

"All my success in life, all my tremendous financial prestige," he said proudly, "I owe to one thing alone—pluck, pluck, pluck!"

He made an impressive pause here, but the effect was ruined by one student, who asked impressively:

"Yes, sir; but how are we to find the right people to pluck?"
